INDEX OF FIRST LINES

I	I thought once how Theocritus had sung	3
II	But only three in all God's universe	4
III	Unlike are we, unlike, O princely Heart!	5
IV	Thou hast thy calling to some palace-floor	6
V	I lift my heavy heart up solemnly	7
VI	Go from me. Yet I feel that I shall stand	8
VII	The face of all the world is changed, I think	9
VIII	What can I give thee back, O liberal	10
IX	Can it be right to give what I can give?	11
X	Yet, love, mere love, is beautiful indeed	12
XI	And therefore if to love can be desert	13
XII	Indeed this very love which is my boast	14
XIII	And wilt thou have me fashion into speech	15
XIV	If thou must love me, let it be for nought	16
XV	Accuse me not, beseech thee, that I wear	17
XVI	And yet, because thou overcomest so	18
XVII	My poet thou canst touch on all the notes	19
XVIII	I never gave a lock of hair away	20
XIX	The soul's Rialto hath its merchandize	21
XX	Beloved, my beloved, when I think	22
XXI	Say over again, and yet once over again	23
XXII	When our two souls stand up erect and strong	24

XXIII	Is it indeed so? If I lay here dead	25
XXIV	Let the world's sharpness like a clasping knife	26
XXV	A heavy heart, Beloved, have I borne	27
XXVI	I lived with visions for my company	28
XXVII	My own Beloved, who hast lifted me	29
XXVIII	My letters! all dead paper, mute and white!	30
XXIX	I think of thee!—my thoughts do twine and bud	31
XXX	I see thine image through my tears to-night	32
XXXI	Thou comest! all is said without a word	33
XXXII	The first time that the sun rose on thine oath	34
XXXIII	Yes, call me by my pet-name! let me hear	35
XXXIV	With the same heart, I said, I'll answer thee	36
XXXV	If I leave all for thee, wilt thou exchange	37
XXXVI	When we met first and loved, I did not build	38
XXXVII	Pardon, oh, pardon, that my soul should make	39
XXXVIII	First time he kissed me, he but only kissed	40
XXXIX	Because thou hast the power and own'st the grace	41
XL	Oh, yes! they love through all this world of ours!	42
XLI	I thank all who have loved me in their hearts	43
XLII	My future will not copy fair my past	44
XLIII	How do I love thee? Let me count the ways	45
XLIV	Beloved, thou hast brought me many flowers	46

I

I thought once how Theocritus had sung
Of the sweet years, the dear and wished-for years,
Who each one in a gracious hand appears
To bear a gift for mortals, old or young:
And, as I mused it in his antique tongue,
I saw, in gradual vision through my tears,
The sweet, sad years, the melancholy years,
Those of my own life, who by turns had flung
A shadow across me. Straightway I was 'ware,
So weeping, how a mystic Shape did move
Behind me, and drew me backward by the hair;
And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—
“Guess now who holds thee!”—“Death,” I said, But, there,
The silver answer rang, “Not Death, but Love.”

II

But only three in all God's universe
Have heard this word thou hast said,—Himself, beside
Thee speaking, and me listening! and replied
One of us . . . that was God, . . . and laid the curse
So darkly on my eyelids, as to amerce
My sight from seeing thee,—that if I had died,
The death-weights, placed there, would have signified
Less absolute exclusion. “Nay” is worse
From God than from all others, O my friend!
Men could not part us with their worldly jars,
Nor the seas change us, nor the tempests bend;
Our hands would touch for all the mountain-bars:
And, heaven being rolled between us at the end,
We should but vow the faster for the stars.

Unlike are we, unlike, O princely Heart!
Unlike our uses and our destinies.
Our ministering two angels look surprise
On one another, as they strike athwart
Their wings in passing. Thou, bethink thee, art
A guest for queens to social pageantries,
With gages from a hundred brighter eyes
Than tears even can make mine, to play thy part
Of chief musician. What hast thou to do
With looking from the lattice-lights at me,
A poor, tired, wandering singer, singing through
The dark, and leaning up a cypress tree?
The chrism is on thine head,—on mine, the dew,—
And Death must dig the level where these agree.

IV

Thou hast thy calling to some palace-floor,
Most gracious singer of high poems! where
The dancers will break footing, from the care
Of watching up thy pregnant lips for more.
And dost thou lift this house's latch too poor
For hand of thine? and canst thou think and bear
To let thy music drop here unaware
In folds of golden fulness at my door?
Look up and see the casement broken in,
The bats and owlets builders in the roof!
My cricket chirps against thy mandolin.
Hush, call no echo up in further proof
Of desolation! there's a voice within
That weeps . . . as thou must sing . . . alone, aloof.

V

I lift my heavy heart up solemnly,
As once Electra her sepulchral urn,
And, looking in thine eyes, I over-turn
The ashes at thy feet. Behold and see
What a great heap of grief lay hid in me,
And how the red wild sparkles dimly burn
Through the ashen greyness. If thy foot in scorn
Could tread them out to darkness utterly,
It might be well perhaps. But if instead
Thou wait beside me for the wind to blow
The grey dust up, . . . those laurels on thine head,
O my Belovéd, will not shield thee so,
That none of all the fires shall scorch and shred
The hair beneath. Stand further off then! go!

VI

Go from me. Yet I feel that I shall stand
Henceforward in thy shadow. Nevermore
Alone upon the threshold of my door
Of individual life, I shall command
The uses of my soul, nor lift my hand
Serenely in the sunshine as before,
Without the sense of that which I forbore—
Thy touch upon the palm. The widest land
Doom takes to part us, leaves thy heart in mine
With pulses that beat double. What I do
And what I dream include thee, as the wine
Must taste of its own grapes. And when I sue
God for myself, He hears that name of thine,
And sees within my eyes the tears of two.

VII

The face of all the world is changed, I think,
Since first I heard the footsteps of thy soul
Move still, oh, still, beside me, as they stole
Betwixt me and the dreadful outer brink
Of obvious death, where I, who thought to sink,
Was caught up into love, and taught the whole
Of life in a new rhythm. The cup of dole
God gave for baptism, I am fain to drink,
And praise its sweetness, Sweet, with thee anear.
The names of country, heaven, are changed away
For where thou art or shalt be, there or here;
And this . . . this lute and song . . . loved yesterday,
(The singing angels know) are only dear
Because thy name moves right in what they say.
